

Towards an Inclusive Peace

Integrated approaches to prevention

08 – 12 July 2019

DAILY PROGRAMME

Caux Conference and Seminar Centre

Introduction

Violent extremism is one of the most pressing issues of our time. It confronts us in our communities in unexpected ways and we reflexively accept simple explanations for this form of violence. In order to quell the violence and maintain security, current approaches turn to conventional solutions such as increased militarization or increased use of force. However, these responses are often inadequate and disconnected from the affected communities. The situation can easily morph into essentializing narratives, social exclusion, political manipulation and ethnic profiling, thereby weakening community relationships. Doubling down on these past tactics will not resolve the issue. A new approach is needed.

Towards an Inclusive Peace (TIP) advocates for a human-centered approach to violent extremism that prioritizes sustainable peace, while dealing with root causes, advancing human rights, strengthening communities and enabling development. In 2017 we began by exploring the root causes of this phenomenon from six different perspectives: the economy, the environment, politics, race and ethnicity, gender and religion. In 2018 we delved into the impact of violent extremism on local communities and on perpetrators, looking at how those communities could be restored, while bringing about justice.

In 2019 Towards an Inclusive Peace explores and critically discusses the four principles of prevention: inclusiveness, sustainability, resilience and context-specificity. We will focus on the role that resilience has in preventing societies from descending into crisis, including but not limited to violent extremism. Likewise, the event will discuss the need for increased protection for peacebuilders, from local community leaders to international NGO representatives who are at the forefront of responding to this extreme form of violence and whose lives are increasingly at risk.

Speakers and facilitators will share their knowledge and experience; community time will provide space for reflection and story-sharing; the workshop sessions will further equip you with new skills and perspectives; the evening sessions will allow for personal connection and relaxation and quiet time will give you the opportunity every morning to be in tune with your inner self. In the following pages you can find the event's detailed programme, and a description of the workshop sessions.

We warmly welcome you in this journey to inspire, equip and connect. Make the most of this event filled with global and local perspectives, and diverse people from around the globe. Do not forget to enjoy the surroundings!

Please note that we are present on social media, notably Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and LinkedIn. Follow us there and don't forget to also share the Facebook Livestream with your friends!

Workshop Tracks

At Towards an Inclusive Peace you can choose to take part in different workshops that focus on equipping you with peacebuilding tools for your work in the field, your organization or your community. These workshops are run by practitioners and civil society organizations from around the world. You can commit to one workshop track over three afternoons or join a different one each day. The workshops have different characters and methodologies. They are all interactive and your voice will be heard!

How to use the workshops programme

The left column of the programme contains important information about the training sessions:

1. The workshops fall into three main workshop tracks: Prevention (PVE), Community Resilience (CRT) and Protection of Peacebuilders (PPT).
2. All workshops will be offered in parallel sessions from Tuesday 9th to Thursday 11th. They will take place from 16:30-18:15 with a tea break in between. Each workshop is identified with a number next to the workshop track letters.
3. Some training sessions build on each other over two or three days. These sessions are identified as S1, S2 or S3. Others are stand-alone sessions and you can attend on any day they are offered. They are identified as SA.

Every day the workshops will last about 1.5 hours. Punctuality is important so that you can make the most of them and the facilitators can start on time!

- Prevention Track (PVE)

The prevention track will introduce tools from diverse contexts. It will focus on how local communities together with national and international actors address the main drivers of violent extremism while adopting a human-centered approach.

- Community Resilience Track (CRT)

Community Resilience is the measure of the sustained ability of a community to channel available resources to withstand, respond to and recover from adverse situations. This track will look into community-led approaches to respond creatively and contextually to conflicts, while strengthening the agency of the local actors.

- Protection of Peacebuilders (PPT)

Peacebuilders are exposed to high levels of stress and secondary trauma when working in conflict-affected settings. This can have an impact on their work and on their levels of empathic understanding. This track therefore proposes tools for reflective and mindful practices which help assimilate the emotional impact of conflict, adapted to each person's needs, as a key aspect of sustaining a healthy community of peacebuilders.

- Prevention Track

PVE1-SA | Track 6 diplomacy: Understanding CVE and PVE through a Peacebuilding Lens | Room 300C (Session 1 of 1)

This workshop highlights an evidence-based understanding of the drivers of violent extremism, while showcasing policy and political responses for participants to articulate alternative peacebuilding approaches. We will explore advocacy approaches for decision-makers and map out research agendas from instances of positive deviance to build constructive responses to conflict. This session will also provide some background of trauma-healing and trust-building approaches.

Facilitated by Daniel Hyslop | Interpeace

PVE2-S1 | Preventing Violent Extremism in Youth through Board Games | Games and Gatherings (Session 1 of 3)

This workshop will present a creative board game developed by Peace Generations which is used to prevent violent extremism. It introduces 12 basic peace values, such as accepting oneself, overcoming prejudice, respecting differences, celebrating diversity, understanding conflict, rejecting violence, and forgiveness. 416 educators and 6,252 students have been successfully trained in Indonesia with this model.

Facilitated by Irfan Amalee | Peace Generations, Nenden Mutiara and Miftahul Huda | lofC Indonesia

- Community Resilience Track

CRT1-S1 | Intergenerational Dialogue: Peace Begins at Home | Room 315
(Session 1 of 3)

This workshop explores the issues of social cohesion in today's world and looks in depth at the push and pull factors of violent extremism from different levels: home, community and society. The workshop will create an opportunity to reframe the challenge of countering violent extremism (CVE). Drawing on the tools and techniques used in peacebuilding, state and non-state actors will be equipped to: (1) understand the dynamics which foment violent extremism, (2) creatively identify a set of tools and approaches that prevent those dynamics from giving rise to violent extremism; and (3) ensure that responses do not aggravate and radicalize affected communities even further.

Facilitated by Amina Khalid and Michelline Ngongo | lofC UK

CRT2-S1 | Being Ourselves – Beyond Individual and Collective Trauma | Games and Gatherings
(Session 1 of 3)

This workshop will provide a space to understand the anatomy and physiology of trauma, where it sits, its different levels and its impact on life. Participants will also be invited to discuss the need to address the 'deeper issues' connected to trauma. The workshop will offer simple and accessible resources to help individuals and communities find support and resilience. Case studies and practical examples will be used to make this an experiential journey. What makes this approach special is the attention it pays to the 90% of our subconscious thoughts that drive our lives, emotions, civilization, culture and society.

Facilitated by Daya Baghandas and Dida Guigan | Neuro Network

- Protection of Peacebuilders Track

PPT1-S1 | Strategic Non-violent Communication | Belle Epoque
(Session 1 of 2)

Non-violent communication has the potential to increase understanding and connection while reducing confusion and harm. This workshop will provide a scaffolding on which participants can practise building non-violent habits of communication and reflect on specific opportunities for non-violent communication in their work. The four components of non-violent communication covered in this workshop involve communicating the concrete actions to be addressed, the feelings in relation to those actions, the needs those feelings are connected to, and finally, the concrete actions that would meet those needs. This workshop assumes that nonviolence, personal transformation, and critical analysis of power structures are all valuable components of the work for positive systemic change.

Facilitated by Abigail Lash Ballew and Joshua Ballew | Community Trustbuilding Fellows – lofC US

PPT2-S1 Civil Society Mechanisms for Responding to the Protection Needs of Peacemakers | Room 300D/E (Session 1 of 3)

This workshop will facilitate an exchange of the strategies and approaches used by local peacebuilders to respond to their own protection needs in the context of insufficient state and international protection regimes. It will provide an opportunity to share experiences and coalesce around good practices for civil society actors to establish mechanisms to respond to protection needs. A few existing models will be presented by peacebuilders who have designed these in different geographic contexts with different violence and conflict dynamics.

PVE3-SA Embracing a “Whole of Society” Approach to PVE: Lessons from East Africa | Room 300C (Session 1 of 1)

This workshop will introduce us to the “whole of society” approach, drawing on trends and case-studies from the East African context such as the inclusion of peace education, curriculum development for madrasas, and social media training to provide an alternative understanding of Islam. The focus will be on discussing the roles of some of the community change agents including teachers, psychologists, entrepreneurs, local authorities, artists and social workers in preventing violent extremism (PVE). We will discuss each of these categories and their roles in mainstreaming PVE in everyday lives to prevent youth from radicalization and marginalization. Participants will actively engage and build on live stories, scenarios and examples to test the practicality of the strategies and techniques discussed.

CRT3-S2 | Reclaiming Public Spaces for Peace | Salle Grammont
(Session 1 of 2)

Public spaces in our cities, towns and villages have been used for millennia as vibrant places for meetings, dialogue, learning, exchange and democracy. Extremists have long targeted these spaces for exactly these reasons, disrupting freedom and democracy, and spreading fear and violence while dividing communities. As a result, we are seeing less communal use of public spaces and the increasing physical dominance of safety barriers, checkpoints and security patrols. This workshop will explore different ways of reclaiming those public spaces for peace.

Facilitated by Lisa-Raine Hunt | UK Home Office, local and central government

CRT4-S1 | The Triggering Event Cycle | Room 115
(Session 1 of 2)

As we do the good work to heal communities and prevent future violence, we are often faced with our own or others' unhealed personal wounds. Even the most well-intended comments or innocuous moments can trigger disproportionate emotional responses. Emotions can run high and elicit defensiveness, or conversely, sensitivities may elicit feelings of self-devaluation. After a triggering event, we tend to follow a predictable triggering cycle made up of seven steps. This workshop will walk participants through the seven steps and bring awareness of how to best manage triggering events.

(Session 1 of 1)

Engaging leaders from religious communities in interreligious dialogue (IRD) can play a significant role in transforming attitudes, perceptions, and relationships. But how can dialogue transform attitudes and perceptions of those who are at greatest risk of being affected by violence and extremism? This workshop will draw on the experiences of the KAICIID Fellows and equip participants to better understand how religious leaders and interreligious dialogue can contribute to creating more cohesive and peaceful societies.
